Kasey byEffects of microtubule/cytoskeleton drugs on the development of decidual cells and the growth of rat deciduas. In the present study, we have tested the effects of microtubule-stabilizing (taxol) and destabilizing (colchicine) drugs on the development of decidual cells and the growth of deciduas. Timed pregnant Sprague-Dawley rats received a single treatment of one of the following: 1) an injection of colchicine or, 2) an injection of taxol (or control injection) on day 6-7 of pregnancy. On day 13-14 of pregnancy, the rats were sacrificed and tissues of the decidual zone were collected. Decidual cells were collected by collagenase digestion and were cultured for 24 h before the drug effect was determined. Although the number of decidual cells increased after the colchicine treatment, no effects on the growth of deciduas or cell morphology were detected. In contrast, colchicine decreased decidual cell proliferation and induced a fibroblast-like appearance in the cultured cells. The number of decidual cells was dramatically decreased after the treatment with the taxol, and the growth of deciduas was also inhibited. Treatment with taxol caused obvious effects on decidual cell development, but not on the growth of deciduas. Treatment with colchicine influenced decidual cell development and the growth of deciduas, while the microtubule-stabilizing drug taxol did not. Taken together, the data suggest that microtubules are associated with the development of decidual cells, while actin microfilaments are associated with the growth of deciduas.The World Court has ruled that the government of the United States has no right to detain American citizens without charge or trial. In a 7-0 decision, the court said that five individuals captured in the US after being in Afghanistan had been unlawfully detained. The lead ruling came in a case brought by a coalition of human rights groups, including the Center for Constitutional Rights and Human Rights Watch. The "government does not have the power to imprison persons who have not been charged," the ruling says. The government has 90 days to release the prisoners and pay a $1.9 million bond. In a separate case last month, the court ruled the United States
